

4.	Are there any procedural aspects of the guidance documents which could be improved and if so, how?
5.	Do the guidance documents have any significant omissions; if so what?	You have not given any evidence that commissioning out PCP services to the private and independent sectors is better than retaining them in the NHS in terms of either flexibility (the most important issue) or cost. You simply assert that competition is good and must inevitably result in better services. What is your evidence for this?
6.	Does the guidance cover all relevant matters, insofar as these can be identified; if not, what additional material should be included?	You must consult on whether the British public want to see NHS services privatised and sold off to big private health care companies which are primarily interested in profits for shareholders and not in the quality or cost effectiveness of services. You must provide evidence as to why these private profit seeking companies should be seen as 'world class' and what appropriate skills and knowledge they have to offer the NHS organisations tasked with delivering a universal and comprehensive health care system.

CARE WINTER